

3I - International Internship Incubation

Category : Sustainable development, employment, vocational education

Target Group : Disadvantaged young people, new graduates or senior students in universities, Project partners and experts from the stakeholders and representatives

Project Aims :

The Internships.com survey, conducted between Dec. 1 and Dec. 4, 2014, polled more than 7,300 students and recent graduates, as well as over 300 human resources and recruitment professionals. The results show that internships truly have become the "new interview" in the job search process for students and employers alike. "First and foremost, these results tell us that at a time when 54% of recent graduates are unemployed or underemployed, the best chance you have as a student not to be part of that statistic is to do an internship," says Stuart Lander, chief marketing office at Internships.com. "You have a 7 in 10 chance of being hired by the company you interned with."

Purpose of the project is ; edification of youth in professional adequacy and increasing employability by providing work experience through international internship. Within this context;

- First International Internship Incubation of Europe will be established.
- In the said Incubation, technical education will be given to new graduates/collage students and disadvantaged youth with the aim of giving them occupational proficiency.
